

Foreign consultant delivered a report

The banking system is a criterion that determines the financial and economic basis of the country. Today, it is difficult to imagine its development without international cooperation and foreign experience. Therefore, scientific and theoretical foundations and practical management are of great importance. Exchange of experience is always mutually beneficial. Today, Andrei Mikhailovich Svetlichny, foreign advisor to the chairman of the board of Turonbank, held a seminar for the teaching staff, doctoral students and undergraduates on the topic "Modern knowledge and technologies in the development of the banking system." Modern knowledge and technology are factors that guarantee development. It was decided to hold such events on a regular basis.
